7th Dimensional Tourist

Peregrin Jones (WanderingFalcon)
[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

'There are more worlds than these.' Is a common phrase across all the multitude of opened spheres, thronging with multiversal travellers. Perhaps in an attempt to stave off the inevitable disappointment of how shallow infinity can seem at times. Many who trek out across the madness of it all are often searching for themselves, after all; and can become quite frustrated when throughout literally limitless possibilities... they still cannot find it.

How cheering for them, then... to meet a visitor from somewhere wholly separate. From a plane several steps above or below even the wisest mind's scope. Someone to whom 3-dimensional space and time that only goes forward are frightfully novel concepts.

You left your intangible, indescribable dimension against all better advice. Taking on a shape and form you certainly hoped would be inconspicuous among all these strange, lumpen creatures and their 'laws' of physics and geometry. It is endlessly fascinating, to lumber amongst them... trying to remember which way counts as 'up' and what 'breathing' is for.

- A body (Slot: 0)
What are 'clothes'?

Advanced Skills

- 2 Spell - Thought Vapour (Cost: 1)
- 2 Spell - Assume Shape (Cost: 4)
- 1 Change!

Special

As a being from a whole different level of the multiverse, your sense of self while existing on this plane is... mutable. A fact that can both play to your advantage and disadvantage at times. Whenever you receive a shock, be that physical damage of one sort or another, a sudden onset of strong emotions... or a particularly large sneeze. You must roll immediately on the Change! chart below, and transform accordingly.

You may also initiate a Change! Roll yourself as an Action, at a cost of 3 stamina, and may modify the result of the roll by up to your level in the Advanced Skill, higher or lower.

You may be under several Change! effects at once, and can remove one old effect when you initiate a roll yourself but not when the roll is due to any other cause.

##Roll on 2d6 Change! Transformation

- 2 You vanish back to your own plane of existence, returning to the exact spot in an hour with no knowledge of what has transpired in the meantime.

- 3 Gravity suddenly changes for you, roll a 1d3 with 1 being 'forward', 2 being

TROIKA! COMMUNITY CONTENT

'backward' or 3 being 'up' in relation to your current thinking.
That way is now

'down' for you.

- 4 You are now a liquid. You still have some control over your movement, but will always flow downwards if on any sloping gradient. You cannot hold or wear anything.

- 5 You are now a gas. You can keep yourself from diffusing too much and can even move freely in still air, but will be blown along by any breeze or wind. You cannot hold or wear anything.

- 6 You are suddenly affected by the 'Diminish' spell, shrinking to half your current size.

- 7 You take on the form of the last non-sentient creature you can remember seeing. You have all the skills, attacks and natural abilities of said creature but retain your own stamina. Your GM can always decide if a creature is off-limits for this effect and instead choose another.

- 8 You are suddenly affected by the 'Grow' spell, growing to double your current size.

- 9 You take on the form of the last sentient being you looked at, or are currently looking at. You can replicate their clothes and accessories, their voice and even mannerisms.

However you do not have their skills, abilities or knowledge.

- 10 Gravity suddenly has no effect on you. You may fly freely in any direction with just a thought. This effect lasts only until you next roll on this chart, whatever the cause of said roll. GM's may provide inopportune sneezes at their whim.

- 11 There are now (+1) of you. Cut your current maximum stamina in half. That is the maximum stamina any of you can have while the other exists. Add 1 extra token to the combat stack, you may move or act with any of your bodies when one of your tokens is drawn. If you voluntarily remove this effect, double your maximum stamina. You are fairly certain you're still the original.

- 12 For just a moment... you are freed from the passage of time itself. You may step backwards or forwards to any point in the last or next hour, arriving at the place your 'self' in that moment was/will be, but with/without any extra knowledge you would have gained in that interim. If this roll was a result of damage, you may choose to jump back just that second and completely avoid said damage.

It's the eyes... That infuriate you the most. The gormless, watery way they stare at you as if your outward appearance has quite simply melted half their brain away. For millennia untold you have been actually causing the grey matter of these mortal fools to dribble from their nostrils, but one little misjudgement of the best laid plans... and now look at you...

This new form is hardly ideal, but you didn't become an immortal scourge upon the very fabric of creation by quitting so easily.

There must be some way to reclaim your true powers. You must be patient. You must use whatever advantages you do have. You cannot command or whisper to the mewling masses anymore... but that does not mean you cannot bend them to your bidding. If they are going to insist on carrying you around and feeding you and providing those delightful, behind-the-ear head scratches... Well, why not take advantage while you can.

Possessions

- Tiny fangs/claws etc. (Slot: 0)

Advanced Skills

- 4 Cuteness
- 2 Spell - Fear (Cost: 1)
- 2 Spell - Amity (Cost: 4)
- 2 Second Sight
- 2 Performance
- 10 Spell - Xed (Cost: 25)

With one glance at a living target, the unleasher of this raw, unearthly power can utterly eviscerate them in one of three ways. There is no possible protection from it, besides the unfathomable foresight of your GM themselves. The caster must also immediately roll on the Oops! table, and apply the results, unless their stamina is reduced to 0 by casting this spell; in which case its effects are applied to both the target and the caster but no Oops! Roll is needed. Roll 1d3. - On a 1: The target immediately turns completely inside out... then explodes, messily. - On a 2: The target is reduced to a gibbering mess, their mind utterly, irrevocably destroyed. They can't speak, think or remember anything ever again. - On a 3: The target never existed in the first place. Who are you talking about? What were we doing here?

Special

While your current shape may have limited your powers considerably, there are occasions where you can unleash just the smallest sliver of your old strength.

Once a week, or on a sensible timescale agreed with your GM, you may cast the spell Xed without paying its stamina cost.

Dave is a short, balding, middle-aged man of no real discerning features. He cannot fight, has no particular skills and is generally just a normal, humanish sort of guy. If questioned about his presence he will reply: "Oh, I'm just here to carry the (1d6²)'s things." in a cheerful, amiable voice.

No-one will ever feel particularly inclined to inquire further.

Almost-but-not-quite-yet ascendant god

Marcus Falk

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

You are a divine being on the cusp of godhood. Just as you were about to ascend and shed your mortal form you realized how much you would miss mortality, and through a supernatural feat of willpower you managed to halt your ascension before it could complete. However, this means that you are now constantly stuck in a state of divine ascension, and it takes almost all your mental strength to stay in mortal form. It is worth it, though; frankly speaking, the divine realms are pretty boring.

Possessions

- A glowing Halo around your head, you can dim it but never turn it off. (Slot: 1)
- A Reliquary dedicated to yourself, made by one of your followers. (Slot: 1)
- 1d6 Pocket gods. (Slot: 1)

Special

You need to stay ever vigilant - and awake - and devote a significant portion of your willpower to stave off your eventual ascension. You never need to sleep, though even for near-godly beings never sleeping is apparently not good for your general well-being. If you ever fall asleep, fall unconscious, or are reduced to 0 Stamina, roll Luck. If you fail, your concentration breaks and you instantly ascend to godhood - shedding your mortal form and traveling into the divine realms (yeah, roll up a new character).

Amateur Apothecary

Matt Umland

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

You love Drugz. They're great and you've spent a lot of time figuring out how to make them. Are you formally trained? No. Have you done so many Drugz that you are obviously an expert? Yes. And now that you have put in the time to hone your craft of making and doing Drugz, it only seems right to offer your services to friends, neighbors and everyone else.

Possessions

- Make-shift chemistry set. (Slot: 1)
- 3 doses of Drugz (Slot: 1)
see special
- 1 dose of poison. (Slot: 1)
- Lots of baggies, jars and vials (Slot: 1)

Advanced Skills

- 3 Chemistry
- 2 Poison
- 2 Foraging
- 1 Healing

Special

You may test your Chemistry skill during downtime to craft a dose of Drugz. Anyone who takes a dose must roll on the Mien table below. You are an expert and thus may roll Mien twice and take either result. The effect lasts 1d3 hours.

Other Drugz with different effects can be crafted with appropriately weird and rare ingredients.

Mien on Drugz

1. "Love is Everything" (+2 Etiquette)

TROIKA! COMMUNITY CONTENT

2. Speechless with unbreakable focus (+1 Skill. Test Your Luck to talk.)
3. "I have x-ray vision" (This may or may be true. Consult the GM.)
4. Terrified and angry (+1 Attack. Test Your Luck to control yourself.)
5. "I can see time." (+2 Second Sight)
6. Bad trip (Roll on the Oops table. The user counts as the wizard. Other outcomes will be clarified by the GM.)

Brine Baron

Hunter Herminath

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

If food can be soaked in brine to extend its shelf life, why not soak oneself in the brine barrel for a lengthy lifespan? You couldn't argue with that logic. After countless nights pickling away in your brine barrel, you have extended your lifespan. Sure, you now reek of dill and vinegar and your skin is as sallow as a pickled garlic, but at least you had an additional two years added to your lifespan!

Possessions

- 2d6 Cucumbers or Eggs (Slot: 1)
Consuming 2 counts as one ration
- 2 Jars (Slot: 1)
Good for holding liquids and pickles
- Half a kilo of Dill (Slot: 1)
Why did you need to bring so much dill?
- Club (Slot: 1)
- An Extra Two Years (Slot: 0)
Which took you about three years in the barrel to get

Advanced Skills

Feuds between wizards can get intense. You were summoned at the height of a particularly heated spat by one wizard to torment another. To stand outside their house at night and wail mournfully. To lurk in their corner of their eye. To knock upon their window when they thought they were alone. To steal their shoes sometimes.

Then one day they skipped town and grabbed a barge to a different Sphere, severing the psychic connection you had with them. Maybe you have some clues to follow up on that could tell you where they went so you can resume the haunting. Maybe your plan is to simply earn enough gold to allow you to visit every Sphere in the hump-backed sky systematically and see if any of them ping your ghostly radar. Peregrin Jones \(WanderingFalcon\)
[\[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024\]](#)

Description

When first informed of the Hummingbird Knights that fly out from Pearlescent Court, one might imagine armoured warriors riding fluttering birds of gigantic size. But in fact, the hummingbirds of Invertia are approximately the same size as similar species found in many other spheres. The knights have simply found a method of attaching quite a fair number of them to every available surface of their armaments in tiny, intricate cages. The buzz, rustle and twitter of their approach is quite extraordinarily loud... as is the amount of sweet fruit syrup that they must feed their feathered companions in order to maintain such energetics. Yet the acts of glittering airborne mobility and lancing acrobatics they can perform is a sight to behold.

There is certainly a reason they are considered among the most formidable combatants in all Invertia.

The Hummingbird Knight's extraordinary combat prowess comes at a cost, one that usually prevents them from straying too far from the Pearlescent Court itself: To enable 10 minutes of flight the knight must feed his birds a vial of Incredibly Sweet Syrup through a series of intricate channels in his armour. This syrup is made from the crushed pulp or pooled nectar of several fruits and flowers found on the roof of Invertia, which can be dangerous to collect.

Additionally, a knight requires at least 30 Hummingbirds secured to his armour to allow flight. Should he or she find themselves with any less than that... Well there is a reason their squires carry large nets. Wild birds can most often be found in the same places the ingredients for syrup are.

Just A Dad (Pete)

Richard Markert

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

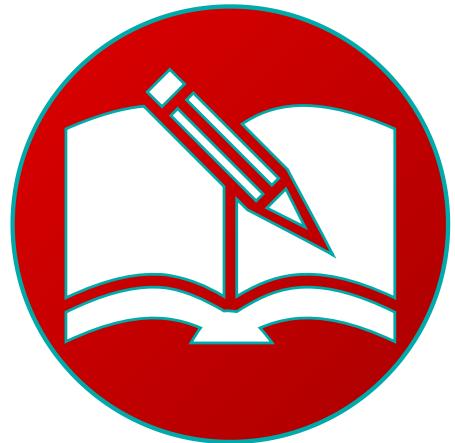

Pete was just enjoying a regular backyard barbecue when a kiddie pool turned into a portal to

Troika. Now, he's on an unexpected vacation, navigating the bizarre and surreal world of Troika with nothing but his dad gear and a determination to make the best of it. He's always got time to show you pictures of his kids—spend too long looking, and you might notice them smiling back.

Karmic Book Keeper

Juno Zampogna

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

Maximizing profits by any means necessary can regrettably incur a great karmic debt, much larger than any truly great business man can hope to pay off in a lifetime without risking harm to the bottom line. This is where you come in. As a Karmic Book Keeper, you take on a client's burden of causality. This is usually done to get in the good graces of some higher power, but in some instances, Karmic Book Keepers have been hired to pettily scorn such powers.

Longfolk Archer

Text and Image Edit by The Furtive Goblin
[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

You have done the forbidden, and ventured beyond the Axe bitten Woods to hunt the corruption that squirms rotten and sickly-sweet from the depths of the Reossos Basin. Your elongated twelve-foot tall, ash-painted frame is unnerving to outsiders, as is your even taller longbow. But when the decaying monsters show up, they appreciate having you and your meters-long arrows to protect them. You've also developed a taste for archery competitions with little folk who call your bow too huge and unwieldy to use.

Marine Selenologist

AS & BB

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

Description

Every night, you would leave your home to float up to the moonlit surface, each tentacle clasping a different instrument.

You would observe and measure the movements of the magnificent Tidemover and return to your people with calendars and forecasts.

But you have nowhere to return to now.

You are the sole survivor of Atlantis' second fall. From the bottom of the sea you rise, to take vengeance on those that have destroyed your little hideaway beneath the waves.

Possessions

- Saline Safety Suit (Slot: 2 - Armour: 1)
- Moon charts, selenolabe, armillary sphere, and other measuring equipment (Slot: 1)
When properly set up, these add +1 to your Selenology skill
- Folding Gyroscopic Buoy-Table (Slot: 1)
A device that provides a still and level working surface even in mild waves
- Heirloom harpoon (Slot: 1)

Advanced Skills

- 3 Swim
- 3 Selenology
The study of movements of moons and other close celestial objects, and their effects on tides, fates and life cycles of were-creatures.
- 3 Scoffing at Astrologists
- 2 Mathmology

TROIKA! COMMUNITY CONTENT

- 1 Underwater Fighting

Fighting in water and water-like substances. You ignore all penalties the GM might associate with fighting in such environments.

Special

You need seawater to breathe. If your gills are exposed to air or fresh water, roll as if you were drowning.

Your Saline Safety Suit protects you from this, as well as from all airborne diseases and poisons, but needs to be refilled once every three days.

You have eight tentacles instead of the usual two legs.

When used in combat, they deal damage as Small Beast.

You can use your tentacles to operate selenological equipment and other precise machinery.

Weapons and shields wielded in your tentacles are ineffective when not underwater.

Mask of The Den

Hunter Herminath

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

Yesss, it iss a bit sssussspiciousss that the cloak is hissing.

You're a trapped soul of an acolyte of the bygone cult of Yosomauth the Endless Serpent in a ceremonial mask you have worn many times before. While sentient, your mask form is unable to move without the aid of a posse of snakes that form a pseudo body around you. Without a connection to your god, you must forge your own path in this new age and find a way to reconcile with the Serpent Lord.

- 2 Spell - Serpent Staff (Cost: 1)

A beginner spell that's commonly used to frighten enemies or perform practical jokes on fellow arcanium scholars. The caster turns a nearby wooden staff or stick into a large snake. Once transmuted, the player rolls a d3 to determine the mein of the snake. 1. Snake is harmless and tries to gently constrict the nearest target. 2. Snake is aggressive and bites the nearest target (small beast damage) 3. Snake has two heads and looks rather confused.

- 2 Snake Speech
The ability to commune with your serpent brethren
- 1 Stealth
- 1 Poisons
- 1 Occult
The knowledge of occult practices

Special

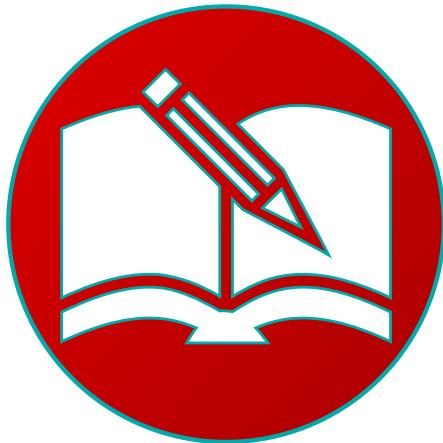

TROIKA! COMMUNITY CONTENT

You're immortal. Your stamina reflects the structural integrity of your snake woven form. When it hits zero, all of your snakes are dead, and your mask form cannot move.

- 1 Craft - Painting

Special

To cast an illusion you must use a mirror in conjunction with your Phenakistoscope set, reading the moving images as if they are an animated grimoire. Each imagery you conjure during your casting requires a different disc to be read, one that better represents the desired effects.

- Frogs and snakes crawling out of a pit.
- A maestro vigorously conducting.
- A beautiful visage turning into a monster.
- Two men brawling.
- A dragon devouring a carriage.
- A humanoid shifting between giant and small size.

To craft a new illusion, you need a blank disc and painting implements. Attempt a Painting check to produce the proper illustrations - on a failure the intended illusion will require an extra Stamina to coalesce.

PHENAKISTOMANCER is an independent production by Emanoel Melo and the Cabinet of Curiosities and is not affiliated with the Melsonian Arts Council.

Pupa of The Many Mother

Noah M. Bartel

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

No longer a helpless larva, you have recently arisen from the The Fleshy Crucible to begin your lifelong journey of energy collecting. Your ungainly outer panoply can invert into a hydrostatic jelly, fitting through nigh every crevice. Whether writhing in their birth place or off in the many spheres syphoning life force from creatures and loci of power alike, you and your billions of siblings share a common goal: to make Her proud.

Possessions

- Hydrostatic Pouch (Slot: 0)
- Electromagnetically Charged Umbilical Stump (Slot: 1)

Advanced Skills

- 5 Spell - Continue the Cycle (Cost: X)

Maximum stamina of the caster. The caster plants themselves firmly into the ground, expelling all of their energy and transforming into a living basin capable only of producing eggs and fostering their hatching. This is the final stage of life for the Many. The Spell lasts until all energy is expelled and all eggs are hatched, resulting in the death of the caster.

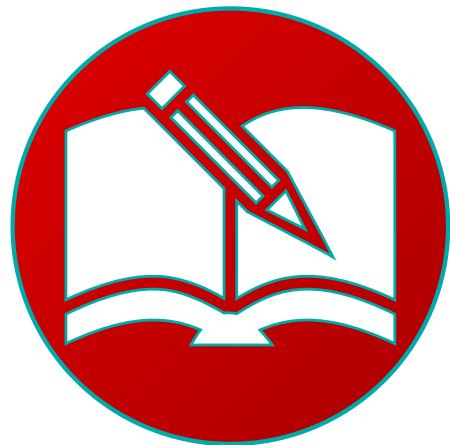

- 4 Spell - Syphon Energy (Cost: 2)

The caster touches an energy source, be it a living being or a locus of power, and absorbs energy from it. In addition to doing damage, the energy heals the caster for the amount of damage dealt.

Rebel Thinking Engine Administrator

Kirt A. Dankmyer (Ivanhoe Unbound)
[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

In one far corner of what was once the First Empire, there was a tract of land on a backwater Sphere that changed hands between the First Empire and a particularly powerful and independent Other Lord on a regular basis. The Other Lord had a Thinking Engine built to help administer the territory when it changed hands, so projects wouldn't get lost when the person in charge changed. This seemed to keep the serfs happy, so the First Empire used it as well. Long after the First Empire and the Other Lords were dust, your family continued to maintain the machine for whoever was currently in control, following a manual that was annotated and re-copied over and over again through the centuries. You were stunned to discover from a traveler from another Sphere that your skills were considered a lost art and most Thinking Engines had to maintain and repair themselves. You were horrified. After making sure your siblings had a copy of the Manual, you decided to go on the road.

Possessions

- Soldering iron (Slot: 1)
Can be used to repair Thinking Machines that have not become flesh
- Type VI Thinking Engine System Administrator's Manual, Annotated (Slot: 1)
An illuminated family heirloom
- 2d6 Plasma Cores (Slot: 1)
- 1d6 Used Plasma Cores (Slot: 1)

Special

In theory, given the right parts, you could build a new Thinking Engine, using Thinking Engine Code to create a personality for it. This would be the first new Thinking Engine in centuries. Doing that has never occurred to you because you've never had the right parts.

You know better than to try to overwrite or change an existing Thinking Engine's code. Your Language skill more lets you talk to Thinking Engines no matter what mortal languages they speak and no matter how mad or incoherent they have become. From there you use Etiquette and (psychological) Healing much in the way one might help an ordinary human being. You have a +1 when using those skills on a Thinking Engine.

SPIDER-HUMAN

Cussa Mitre & Mamu Zinha / Hod Publishing
[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

You were a normal spider. Nothing fancy, just jumping up and down the block, webbing around to catch some flies. But one day, everything changed when you accidentally landed on a delicious sandwich that a radioactive man was eating. So, you were bitten by a radioactive man. You didn't develop super strength, speed, or agility; you simply grew to human size. Oddly enough, you also acquired a human face and the ability to speak. Unfortunately, you can't see in 360 degrees anymore. You really miss the old days...

Possessions

- Exoskeleton (Slot: 8 - Armour: 4)

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

Once, you stood as a statue, a monument to your god's power and favor. You were the embodiment of the god of a thousand names. One fateful day, you gained sentience. Now animated, free to roam the world, unbound from the earth. Was it a deranged alchemist, or a powerful sorcerer that breathed life into you, or was it your god's last divine intervention? As eons passed, believers vanished, and now there is no one left who remembers your name or names.

The Arithmomancer

Stephen Nicklus

[\[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024\]](#)

The universe can be counted. It all adds up and magic is no different. It's not mystical, and doesn't break any rules of physics, it's just not well understood by the layman (and usually not by your typical mage either), and so is given a mythical status.

The Arithmomancer sees the esoteric formulae of magic for what they really are: A series of patterns and axioms used by charlatans, in secret cabals to obscure scientific advancement from the public at large in order to subjugate them.

Magic indeed.

Possessions

- An Objectively Ugly Wizard Outfit. (Slot: 1)
- D6 Mystic Chalk allows drawing on the air and acts as a plasmic core. (Slot: 1)
- Several racy math textbooks. (Slot: 1)

Advanced Skills

The Ass Hole

Min Clint

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

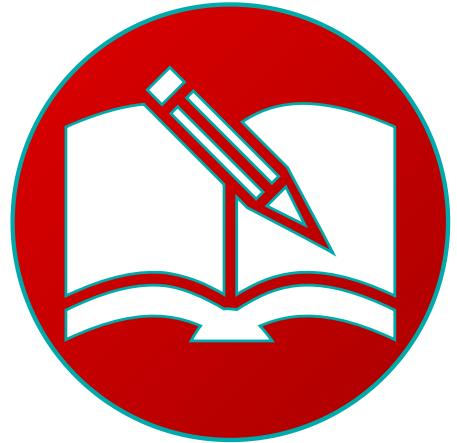

When you fell into the hole, the hole fell into you.

An unnatural amalgam of the intellect between and a common farmer's burro, you are lodged in semi existence.

You fail as a pack animal, bags and boxes sliding off into dimensional eternity.

You founder as malevolent void, now limited in locality and anti-volume.

At least in your current predicament the grass is greener and delectable.

Special

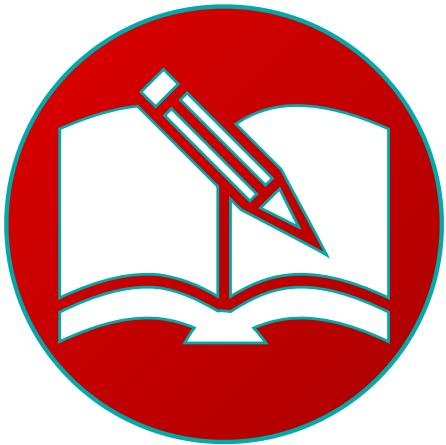

You are a hole in reality. As such materials and objects can fall into you as if you were a portal to the cosmos.

You can not hold or manipulate normal matter, but you can move around as a normal ass would and stand or rest on the ground.

You no longer need to eat, drink, or breathe, but might find some comfort in taking those things into yourself.

The Reincarnicopia

Wilderwhim

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

The Timescape is home to many planar drifting loners, but you are the loneliest and driftiest. For eternity you have stood by watching from afar. You've witnessed all friends and acquaintances wither and die over time. The concept of age has lost meaning, given that everytime you "die"- you rejuvenate into a being with a new personality and values. You do remember in a strange distant kind of way, what happened in your past lives. Impressions and images locked behind bulletproof glass. More immediate is that you feel in your very bones, that the next life will be your last. You desperately want to spend it with this colorful band of weirdos on a road trip to save the multiverse, and everyone else's chance at future life and love.

Possessions

- Well Tailored Fine Clothes (Slot: 1)
- The Velare (Slot: 1)
Beautiful Bolo Tie
- Nanotech Multitool (Slot: 1)
Can Transform into Any Mundane Hand Tool
- Chronicle of Your Past Lives (Slot: 1)

Troikan Tourist

Aaron Tenney

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

A Million Spheres to see and so little time! You're a wide-eyed traveler, eager to experience all the wonders the cosmos has to offer, to capture its sights, sounds, and smells in holo-print; to immerse yourself shamelessly in culture and cuisine; to haggle and overpay for souvenirs; to earnestly negotiate language barriers and fumble through guidebooks and four-dimensional maps. Despite your cultural and linguistic shortcomings, you remain optimistic and open-minded, always excited for the next adventure.

Possessions

- Tri-Sensor Holo-Capture Device (Slot: 1)
captures sights, sounds, and smells in holo-print; includes one roll of holo-film
- Holo-album (Slot: 1)
holds up to a hundred holo-prints

Wandering Judge

BaneVoice

[Troika! Community Jam: Backgrounds 2024]

Presiding over court can be a challenge in the city of Troika. There's no Sphere in the sky that sharp litigators won't look to in search of some new, and very relevant to this matter before you your honour, legal precedent to refer to in service of their client. It takes an equally sharp legal mind to navigate these courtroom combats and rule justly in the spirit of multiversal law. These city judges are rightfully afforded a great deal of respect.

And then there's you.

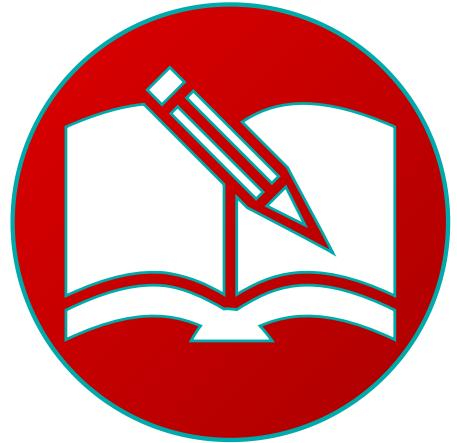

Now, you may not be some fancy big city law type (from The big city) but out there in countryside, people still need someone to bang a gavel, deny a motion and maybe even issue a summary judgement or two. And for a nice night's stay in the local inn or a few gold coins (or the local equivalent) that someone could be you! Agitated Chequerman of the Halls of Karpo

Caleb Nelson

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

A starkly contrasting colorless figure, hailing from a dimension that is incompatible with ours. Finely clothed in abstract shades of reality, weaponized with harsh logic and unreality. Its head resembles an object, and a prism, and a geometric shape, and an abstract concept, and a body part, all at once.

Special

The Chequerman has the ability to flicker, instantaneously teleporting a relatively redundant distance away at will. This process is not silent by any means.

In place of standard provisions, the Chequerman can consume colour itself, reducing objects to a stark black-and-white facsimile of its former vibrant self, though this process is incredibly nauseating.

Booger Beast

Booger Beast

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

Booger Beasts are sprung from the collective amassing of flicked boogers from beneath sofas, church benches and dorm room beds. A large conglomeration of dried, yellow, discharge found basic sentience. These creatures are often harmless, but do carry a deep urge to once more feel the caress of a warm nostril cavity, which put any one running up a fever at great risk. During flu season, many citizens run the risk of being visited by this unwelcomed guest. As the Booger Beast is overcome with childlike glee to return to that which it once came from, the victims head will often burst due to the size of the slimy intruder trying to press itself through the nose.

Rascals who've amassed enough clumps of dried mucus often tame their own slimy steed. Therefore Booger Beasts ridden by runaway boys is not an uncommon occurrence. These raucous duos always find ways to cause all types of mischief.

CAULKER

Isla St

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

A caulk is a sticky cerise dendritic monster. If you laid its filaments end to end it would be as long as the path of Saint Imogen The Addled through the Entrails of Tremoring. If you collapsed it into a ball it could be swallowed by Small Dog.

Its brain is its body; it is blind but its hearing is perfect and comprehensive. It sleeps in chunks and lives its life sprawled diffusely though compressed spaces. A single caulk may occupy the cracks, gaps and seams of an several city blocks. An unexpectedly low incidence of drafts or leaks is a telltale sign of a resident caulk in your neighbourhood, as is an occasional pink flicker in the peripheral vision.

When a caulk finds itself exposed or driven from a hiding place it will immediately seek to house itself again with any available debris.

Special

When a caulk experiences self actualisation it falls upwards into the sky with its home.

Cauldron Chelonian

conlangen

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

The alchemical masters of House Dargath are often cited as the progenitors of cauldron chelonians, using them as couriers and sentries in their sunken sanctuaries. Upon their introduction into other arcane circles, they caused considerable ire among the warlock covens, describing them as "dull, clumsy, prone to fits of anger." The perception among wizard hunter factions is much the opposite; their kettle shells being especially tough to crack, making them formidable opponents.

Those darkened beings from beyond the heavens whose eyes burn like starlight. They prey upon the unsuspecting and gorge themselves on bright dreams. Those that have proven themselves in the Court of the Chronovore Primarch are elevated to join his immortal cabal.

Special

Chronovores steal latent possibilities from unconscious organisms. When they feast upon the brain waves of an unwitting victim, it erases a possible future timeline from reality. This sustains the Chronovore and restores 1D3 stamina (it also makes Chronovores quite pleased with themselves). Dimensional Rambler

Jarred McDonald

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

Resembling some form of imp or sprite and often found in rundown stores for curios and oddities, the Dimensional Rambler will spout nonsense that trails off into nothing. The mad ramblings serve to confuse adventurers, leaving them vulnerable to be spirited away into one of the many pocket dimensions that, with a snap of its fingers, the Dimensional Rambler has access to. These pocket dimensions are full of shiny trinkets, things that were of the style at the time, and adventurers from times forgotten.

Special

Special 1-

Any players caught up in the long, laborious ramblings of this creature must roll their Luck, with a score of under half the value of their total current Luck. Unfortunate adventurers are whisked away to another dimension. Players are returned to their own world once the Dimensional Rambler is dealt with.

Special 2-

Every turn the Dimensional Rambler takes, has a 1 in 6 chance (score of 4 on 1D6) of negating any player damage as it phases in and out of dimensions to avoid being interrupted until that players turn is over.

Domesticated Miniature Scraper

Tom Woodland

[\[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024\]](#)

The domesticated miniature scraper resembles a scaled common garden slug and measures around 1.8m from head to tail with an arm span of 1.5m from barbed scraper to barbed scraper. It is commonly found in employment by Troika's butchers, rapidly slithering around the shop floor and scraping up any offal and viscera with the scraping claw at the end of its 4 sinewy, skeletal arms. It pulls the tidbits towards its foot flange where the food is sucked underneath the body of the Scraper towards its toothy radula and digestive glands to be rapidly digested and absorbed by the intensely acidic ooze which it secretes.

The aroma of the secretion is likened to citrus and spring meadows. It is pleasant enough and saves its owners a pretty silver penny in mopping the ruddy floors of the abattoir.

The Scraper was once one of the most feared apex predators to have ever been discovered, but now thanks to the abundance of food in the city and the breakthroughs of Lady Marjoram Bank in selective breeding and her practice of negative reinforcement using the Jolt spell and a hot poker, Scrapers are small and satiated enough to be beloved shop pets and valuable business assets . Only 47 deaths have been attributed to Scrapers in Troika this year and only half of those were paying customers.

Special

When angered, hungry, anxious, threatened or curious, the Scraper will rise up on its two back arms and lifts its body vertical, exposing its hideous spongey digestive glands and barb toothed radulas. It will then spray acidic ooze and / or fall on its prey, simultaneously grappling them with its boney arms and pulling them into itself. It will then curl into a ball and digest the subject whole.

If a subject is attacked in this manner by the Scraper, they must test their skill or become grappled.

Dustards

Hunter Herminath

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

In the unkempt cellars and dusty corners of Troika, you are likely to find dustards. These cat-sized crustaceous pests fester in smut in order to build up a coat of dust on their bodies which they utilize for triggering their prey's sinuses into secreting mucus (their food source). On their own, they're not a problem that a swift blow with a broom can't fix. However, when they start nesting and begin to double their numbers day by day, that's when you'll have to give up the house. It's essentially theirs now. Their existence exudes dust and annoyance.

Ghost Writer

Stefano Palma

[\[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024\]](#)

Large spheres needs tends to generate creatures halfway between life and death, a sort of grim reaper, to facilitate the passage of souls. Most of them tend to be skulliform creatures, usually equipped with some sort of fancy weapon like a scythe and/or fancy vehicle, like a stallion or a flaming motorcycle. In some cases, however, some peculiar spheres, filled of many unspeakable and unthinkable horrors like bureaucracy and tons of rules, may produce a very different creature.

Half ghosts, half demons, half lawyers, less then half mathematicians, these creatures are usually grim, stone cold apparition of law and unbending rules, with the sole purpose of making as difficult as possible escaping death, be it rightful or not.

This particular specimen, however is a peculiar beast even compared to its sibligns. It's not clear if this creature was forcefully exiled or willfully abandoned his post, but a burning (half) soul of an artist made this one, utterly incompatible with its original birthplace, making it to set out in the world looking for fortune and unfortunate souls to expose to its less than stellar writing.

Its appearance can vary, usually some sort of historical or modern attire, strictly human clothes, with a skeleton inside, instead of the classical plumpy pinky human.

Very litigious, its usual way of attacking foes consist of writing snarky remarks or horrendous fan fictions, depending on its genre, of its target causing a spontaneous artistic blow so strong that the target body will open up a wound by itself. That's, at least, what he thinks, the reality is that the paper he writes on is capable to transfer the pressure of the pen or quill from it to its target, if angled correctly.

The mien of this creature is rather peculiar, the genre of the writing of this ghastly author will vary with it, having influence over his personality and his overall attitude

TROIKA! COMMUNITY CONTENT

Special

The burning artistic soul cannot completely counteract the lawful nature of this rotten soul, any creature struck three times will die with a striking precision one week from the last hit, or be forced to write complaints and resources for approximately five hours, to appeal the decision. There's a debate on which fate of the two is worse. All the information required for this process will be delivered via a pamphlet exactly 24 hours after the third blow.

Latch Knackers

Jason Riffle

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

The Dwarves of the Latch abandoned their mines ages ago, and none now remembers when or why. The long shafts and delves pockmark the surrounding mountains and hillsides like old scars. Villagers began to reopen these old workings to see if any coal or ore remained in the deep dark, and they were not disappointed. The Dwarves left exposed veins of anthracite, and galena the fledgling miners could exploit. But they also left the Latch Knackers, souls of miners who perished in the deep dark and were never laid to rest. The presence of Latch Knackers in mines may be noted by mischief or mayhem in equal measure, a stolen tool or crumbling slate fall, but always with their rhythmic knocking. Tap, tap, tap...

Special

Latch Knackers can see perfectly in darkness and require no light source to navigate the deep dark.

They project their signature tapping sound anywhere within line of sight and use this ability as both a boon and a warning, drawing attention to hazards or luring explorers into a trap. Use this to build tension and play tricks.

If defeated in combat they will reform in d6 days unless they are laid to rest on the surface.

These all-female cultists are skilled huntresses to the last. They are also devout worshippers of the great Lunar Huntress. They ritually hunt their created prey, the Cheese Golem, across the curdled savannah in bands of 4 or 5. When not hunting, they can be found praying about hunting, planning to hunt, or celebrating the success of a past hunt. They judge people by their hunting prowess and are terrible gossip about those they deem unworthy of the hunt.

Since hunting is a religious act for them, the cultists have very particular requirements about hunting, especially hunting Cheese Golems. From selecting the best cheese golem to hunt to the appropriate way to stalk them, how they may be killed, and the only way to cut the cheese, they always complete these ritual hunts with great displays of gratitude and feigned respect for their prey.

Lunatick

Tom Woodland

[\[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024\]](#)

Lurking in marshes, licks of blue flame dance above waters at night like wispy beacons, follow them and their true purpose will rise from the waters unseen. The fire's an illusion, burning from the head crest of the Lunatick. They lurk around the wetlands in packs, their beacon crests lit, their fur absorbing all light which touches it. Any traveler who strays into the swamp, may drown and be torn apart by the claws of the lunaticks who live deep in the waters. The pack of vain, hungry creatures will then use the skulls as masks which they admire in their reflection on the waters. During the feeding, their fiery head beacon will blaze, illuminating the waters. After they drink their reflections, fortifying themselves for another night, their beacons die out and the skull mask, drained, will crumble into dust. Beware the fat slumbering Lunaticks who lay, dreaming at the bottom of the marshes.

Special

The Lunaticks beacon is always lit providing it is awake. The Lunatick is nocturnal.

Their fur is totally matte black and absorbs all light, rendering them invisible (with the exception of their piercing, tearing claws) to everyone including themselves. The only time their face is visible is when they wear the skull of a drowned traveler and illuminate their fiery head beacon, a process which they use in order to feed on their own reflection.

If you witness the beacons, test your luck or become mesmerized and move towards them by 4 meters each turn.

The Autarchy has its own protective measures in place for courtly conflicts, but who will keep the public safe? It's absolutely not the police. Laden with batons, loudhailers, and soft cushions, the Troikan police force don't seem to be able to stop criminals or dissenters in any way, merely inconvenience them. Some ruffians and anarchists have theorized that these peacekeepers, though organic, have been somehow engineered and mass-produced. The Troikan Public Defense Council would like to remind you that these rumors are just that—rumors—and should not be trusted.

Special

Much like vampires and proselytes, the police must be invited inside in order to enter a private domicile, even with due cause to investigate. PILLAR-BITER

Franc

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

"Who is a pillar-biter in the church, shits devils in his own house." -- Troikan proverb

The hierophage is cursed with the urge to ingest all things holy and blessed with the dental fortitude to do so. By day, pillar-biters are to be found in Troika's places of worship, always in the first row at mass or more often than not leading it. At night, they are down in the catacombs, chewing steadily on mummies, relics, or even the church's very foundations.

In the famous case of the Holy Sepulchre of Donovan Thrice-Knighted, three generations of pillar-biters managed to gnaw away the consecrated earth itself, until finally the entire structure collapsed into the warrens beneath.

Physically, the pillar-biter presents little threat, being little more than a man with a thick jaw, not to mention often unhealthy due to a lack of sunlight and B-vitamins. The true danger instead comes from their position in the clergy and the high estimation of their fellow worshippers. He who learns of a hierophage's true nature will likely soon find papal guards, hired thugs, or zealous mobs knocking at their doors.

Parky

Daniel Sell

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

The parks of Troika, great and small, have resident park keepers, affectionately referred to as 'parkies' by locals, who maintain the hedges and keep the animals and tourists in line. The city, infinite as it is, has a great variety of parks in a great variety of sizes, requiring equivalently varied bodies of park keepers to maintain them. Some of the parks are so large, and some parky stations so remote, that they can go generations without contact with the Troikan Parks Committee, leading to peculiar practices. After a few generations their original remit can get corrupted, protecting the wildlife can turn into a ban on hunting and reliance on eating lost hikers instead, while other groups form cargo cults around pay packets that will never come, and still others even turn to outright monarchism! Quite unthinkable behaviour from a civil servant.

Platonic Crab

Mike Knee

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

Platonic crabs are not true crabs, rather, a sub-species of dragon that decided to convergently evolve the crab body-plan over the course of an otherwise pretty boring Thursday afternoon.

The crabs' outer shells are fractal, folded out from the bubbling chaos of the sub-reality behind the spheres and regimented into eye-bleedingly unlikely shapes, uniformly in a shade of nauseating impossible mauve. Discarded platonic crab moults are indescribably valuable, but rare, as the crabs guard them jealously. Careful analysis of a platonic crab moult would reveal the deepest desire of the crab it came from, dangerous knowledge in the wrong hands.

Platonic crabs tend to be obsessive and maniacal. They are all exceptional mathmologists, largely without peer amongst the countless spheres.

Special

Platonic crabs can alter the properties of things they touch, driving them to more ideal versions of themselves. Instead of dealing damage to a target with its pincers the crab can instead choose to force them to test their luck (or skill for NPCs) or become somewhat more crablike. If this happens to any creature or object more than 3 times they are irrevocably turned into a crab.

Polverean

Gabriel Hernandez

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

The polverean roam in herds across grasslands and forests of the spheres they inhabit. They leave deserts in their wake. They spew out bursts of abrasive dust that grind the unprotected into a fine, nutrient-rich paste that the polverean then absorb through their ambulatory tendrils. They sense the environment through their coarse, prickly fur and the whiskers that grow from their singular central "horn." They reproduce by pollination, with the male dust fertilizing the females during migration. The females then deposit their seeds behind them to bloom when the next rains come. A polverean sprout is mostly indistinguishable from a fern sprout or vine, with a carrot-like growth in the ground. When they reach a mature age, their tendrils pull their "horn" out of the ground, and they begin their migration. Maturation is achieved once every summer, and the seedlings are put down in the late fall. When they emerge from the ground, they are usually about the size of a large humanoid but can grow to be up to 3 times as large before they die in the winter.

Special

The polverean blows a cloud of abrasive dust out of their "nostrils," filling the nearby area. When anyone within melee range takes their turn, they must test their luck or fill their topmost inventory slot with abrasive dust. The dust settles when the end-of-round token is drawn.

Portentia

Peregrin Jones

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

There are a thousand different species of flower scattered across the forests of Invertia's roof, every one a beautiful lure for one type of creature or another.

The Portentia, however, is probably the only variety that targets sentience in particular.

Hanging from a hammock of tough vines; its rubbery petals form a gigantic, sweet-smelling cup always filled near to the brim with crystal clear water.

The area surrounding the flower will be suffused with its enticing, incense-like scent, a scent which seems to naturally cause sensations of deep and lasting calm and the subtle urge to dip one's head into that refreshing pool.

Special

DAMAGE: as special

Any creature who strays within 50m of the flower must make a Luck roll (or skill for NPC's), if they fail they will fall under the sway of the flower.

Any creature influenced in this way will feel an utmost calm, with only the urge to dip its head into the flower's pool, receiving 1d6 stamina healing and a vision from the table below. Unbeknownst to the victim, such a vision is also the seed of the plant: detailing the exact circumstances under which they might perish and a new bloom grow up from their lifeless corpse.

They will then be set free, none the wiser until the situation described occurs, at which point they will instantly find themselves under the effects of both the Purple Lens and Befuddle spells, as described in the Troika! Rulebook. These effects last until the situation resolves itself, or they die... at which point a brand new Portentia bloom will spill forth from within their skull. If they survive, but the situation occurs again, the effects will return, but this time the Befuddle spell will give double the effect it did previously... and so on.

Projectaur

Austin Holm

[TroiKa! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

Projectaurs (also called Lamp-Ogres) are grey-skinned giants with film projectors for heads. They stand three to four metres tall. When awake, their reels spin, and their lenses emit light, projecting the cinema of a lost civilization wherever they look.

The film playing in the Projectaur's head determines its disposition and abilities. Savvy adventurers may take advantage of this, swapping the reels out to change the monster's mein; this requires that the Projectaur be grappled and another reel be loaded to switch to. The current reel cannot be removed while in use. These strange heads are fully biological (other than the film reels) but look and function like their mechanical counterparts.

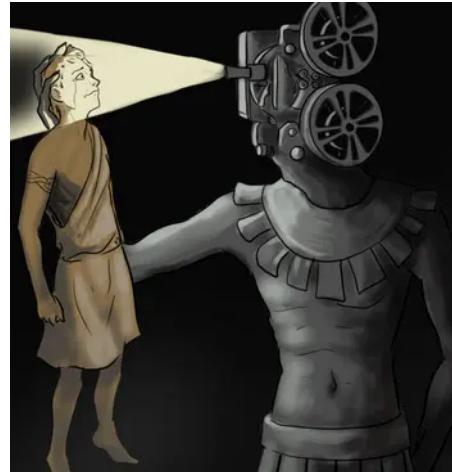

Lamp-Ogres do not speak; they communicate entirely by film clips. For example, a Romance Projectaur might play the scene of its film where the lovers break up to indicate territorial aggression. Ambitious Referees may choose to preselect a few film clips or .gifs to communicate, creating an impressive effect; others may prefer just to describe the footage, allowing for more flexibility and less prep.

Special

Comedy wants only to spread joy; it does this by pinning down passersby and projecting itself into their minds. Victims who fail to Test their Luck spend the next 1d6 days in convulsive spasms of laughter. As you can imagine, this prevents adventuring and quickly becomes unpleasant. Victims may be cured with the Fear spell or Rhinoman stand-up, which is so unfunny it counteracts the effect.

Once Comedy has infected a victim, it will scamper off to avoid retribution. It feasts on the sounds of prompted joy.

Tragedy is the polar opposite of Comedy; naturally, they are very similar. Victims sob and weep for 1d6 days and can be cured by Purple Lens or ice cream treats. Please contact the author if you know of other cures.

Romance induces a state of obsession in its victims. They will defend Romance to death, attack its other targets in a jealous rage, and search for the monster in its absence. Such searchers cannot improve skills while affected and cannot benefit from Exography, Astrology, or Tracking Skills (other than to find the Romance Lamp-Ogre).

The poor souls attacked by Romance can be cured by true Love's Kiss™ or freezing cold.

Documentary prefers solitude and contemplation to hunting. It does not feed on human emotion, preferring to absorb knowledge. The creature leaves a trail of blank books in its wake. Victims of its projection attack Test Luck or else fall asleep; for the next 1d6 days, they dream of the lost civilization of the Projectaurs and gain no benefits from sleep. At the end of this period, the 'victim' may increase either Mathmology, Languages, Evaluate, Healing, or any Crafting Skill by 1.

Horror paralyzes its victims with fear and then feeds off of their screams. Victims Test Luck or else spend the round screaming; their initiative drops to 0, and the noise alerts nearby monsters. At the end of each round, the victim may Test Luck again. Unless the target succeeds, the effect continues.

A character whose Luck is reduced to 0 in this way becomes catatonic; the Projectaur uses such victims as decor to scare others.

Traditional cures include being swaddled in a warm blanket for three rounds or seeing puppies, kittens, and babies frolic. For some, the Presence spell may also be effective.

War is the deadliest of the Projectaurs. Its projection effect need not be focused on a pinned target; if it uses this ability, all creatures within its line of sight must Test Luck or become violent servants of War for the next 1d6 rounds. If a creature kills another sapient being while thus afflicted, the effect is permanent. It rarely travels without a squadron of soldiers.

Its victims cannot be cured.

Soft Nail Man

MamuZinha & Cussa Mitre
[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

There are no specific records about the Soft Nail Man. Most people believe this creature is just a tale told to children to scare them into behaving. However, some researchers think there is more truth to the tale than they would like to admit. Mentions of the Soft Nail Man describe a humanoid creature with large dark circles under its eyes, a result of never sleeping. It walks in a peculiar manner, taking slow, deliberate steps, but can move quickly when it desires.

Some say the Soft Nail Man is the result of an infection, while others believe it to be a curse. There is no logical explanation for when the first one appeared. The transformation process seems to involve increasingly less sleep and the growth of excessively long, flacid and putrid nails.

Special

When an enemy token is drawn, the GM can choose to attack with the Soft Nail Man. If the Soft Nail Man attacks an awake character and deals damage, the character must test their skill to stay awake. If they fail, they fall asleep and can retake the test whenever their token is drawn to wake up.

For sleeping characters, the Soft Nail Man inserts its finger into the mouth, nose, ear, wounds, or any other exposed orifice without requiring a test. Characters must test their luck to avoid exposure to the infection or curse. If they are affected, they have 7 days before they start to transform into a Soft Nail Man. During the transformation, they gain the ability to put creatures to sleep and are tempted to insert their soft nail into others' orifices, though they do not transmit the infection/curse at this stage. After 10 days, the transformation is complete, and they become a monster, effectively equivalent to death, requiring the player to create a new character.

This transformation can be prevented if, before its completion, the character takes a Keratin Potion, which is extremely expensive due to its primary ingredient: dragon scales.

Syndrome-Inducing Imposter

Gabriel Caetano Barbosa

[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024]

A lurker. A Thief. A killjoy. You don't know it's there, not at first. A little compliment for a job well done - a job you never did! A congratulation for winning a prize - but you didn't even sign up to compete! Recognition, praise, smiles, even envy from people you never met before until... until you begin to think you are the impostor! Aren't you?

Born out of overconfident, unprepared Hedziz Ivory Men, a Syndrome-Inducing Imposter is a soul-sucking parasite that latches onto unsuspecting, skilled and capable individuals hit by frustration or doubt. Once the parasite finds a suitable host, they begin sucking their victims abilities and using them to accomplish tasks in their place through space-time interference until the host becomes nothing but a shade of what could have been - soulless and unaccomplished.

Special

DAMAGE: Same as host

Syndrome-Inducing Imposters find potential hosts after they succeed at a Skill check and receive great praise for it. Next time the character fails a Skill check, they must Test their Luck to avoid getting infected. On a miss, the failed Skill check becomes successful against all odds and the Imposter settles in. Any time the host makes a Skill check, they must Test their Luck again, or the parasite will succeed in their place and steal the Advanced Skill used or 1 point from Skill. The host will then receive praise for the inexplicable achievement or success. When the Host has 0 Skill, their soul is completely consumed and the parasite finally takes their place. Syndrome-Inducing Imposter parasites can't be killed by normal means but can be removed with brain surgery. It will temporarily scurry away for 1d6 days when the Hedziz Ivory Man that spawned it is exposed or after very a expensive therapy session.

The Cloak

CadejoNegro

[\[Troika! Community Jam: Bestiary 2024\]](#)

Extremely rare, the extraterrestrial collectives of nano-organisms, each collectively known as The Cloak, are harvested from the Greater Collective by space-faring wizards and used as, well, cloaks. They are sentient, can float through the air, and communicate telepathically. If one decides it likes someone, it will allow them to wear it, and then protect them, alert them of danger, and even carry them short distances through the air. It can separate itself into smaller pieces, but its intelligence and stats are directly related to its size.

Special

Telepathy: If The Cloak sends part of itself inside your ear (and from there into your brain), you will be able to telepathically communicate with the cloak and anyone else it has connected to its network within three miles (five kilometers). Some claim that once inside your brain, The Cloak can also influence the way you think, which is patently untrue.

Regeneration: The Cloak regenerates from harm in mere hours. Even if it takes enough damage to disintegrate into unthinking dust, the dust will slowly reunite and reform within 24 hours. We have not received any credible reports of anyone having permanently destroyed one. Rumors that recent mass extinction events in several spheres are related to retaliation from the Greater Collective for attempts to destroy one of them are nothing more than that, rumors, and should not be disseminated.
